

Happy Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving, the quintessential American holiday, had humble beginnings. On November 11, 1620, sixty-six days after leaving the Old World and surviving an arduous crossing, the British ship Mayflower anchored off Cape Cod, and 102 Pilgrims arrived in the New World. One month later, they crossed Massachusetts Bay to begin settling in Plimoth (Plymouth). The first winter was brutal and by spring, only half of the passengers and crew remained alive. Plimoth was in Wampanoag Territory, and the Indian chief Massasoit, the sachem, the political and military leader of the Wampanoag confederation, also known as Ousamequin (“yellow feather”) had been watching the colonists since they arrived.

Before the Pilgrims arrived, the Wampanoag had been decimated by a mysterious epidemic, and were in danger of being subjugated by the Narragansett Indian tribe. Although they had long suffered under European raiders and many would have preferred to eliminate the new arrivals, Massasoit knew that an alliance could be valuable. On March 22, 1621, Massasoit entered Plimoth for the first time, and with the assistance of Samoset and Tisquantum (“Squanto”), who both spoke English, forged a mutual defense and trade alliance with the Pilgrims. This alliance lasted more than 50 years, until it was broken during King Philip’s War (1675 – 1676).

The Wampanoag helped the English survive by teaching them how to cultivate corn, local fruits, and vegetables. They also taught them to fish, extract sap from maple trees, and avoid poisonous plants. After the first successful corn harvest, the Governor of Plymouth Colony, William Bradford organized a celebratory feast which became known as the “first Thanksgiving”. Very little is known about this celebration. A letter written by Edward Winslow in December 1621 to a friend in England that described the meal shared by the Pilgrims and Indians, and one brief mention in Governor Bradford’s journals “Of Plimoth Plantation”, written years later, mentioned the feast. It lasted 3 days and took place sometime between September and November 1621. Even though it was a celebration of harvest, the Pilgrims were giving thanks for having survived their first year in the New World.

According to culinary historians, the meal at the feast had very little in common with our modern Thanksgiving spread. Although wild turkeys were abundant in the area, there is no record that they were consumed during the celebration. According to Winslow, colonists went on a “fowling” mission while the natives brought “five deer”. Seafood was abundant, especially mussels, lobsters, bass, clams, and oysters. Vegetables included beans, cabbage, carrots, corn, and onions. Since the colonists had no flour, almost no sugar, and no ovens, pies were not part of the first celebration. It is unclear if the Pilgrims continued yearly celebrations, but they did have a second Thanksgiving celebration in 1623 to mark the end of a severe drought. As more and more settlers reached the New World, days of thanksgiving became common practice in New England.

After the Battle of Saratoga, Commander-in-Chief George Washington called for a day of “Solemn Thanksgiving and Praise”, and December 18, 1777 was the first time the 13 colonies celebrated a Thanksgiving Day in unison. Once he was president, George Washington again called for a national Day of Thanksgiving on November 26, 1789, to celebrate the end of the Revolutionary War. In 1817, New York became the first state to adopt an annual Thanksgiving Day. By 1827, Sarah Josepha Hale, the “Mother of Thanksgiving” began her 36-year campaign to establish it as a national holiday, that culminated on October 3, 1863, when President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed that the last Thursday of November would be Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving traditions around the world date to ancient times. In Greece, the 3-day autumn festival known as Thesmophoria was celebrated to honor the Goddess Demeter, the deity of food grains.

Africans always have festivals at the time of harvest. In some parts of Africa good grain harvests are a cause for celebration. In other parts of Africa there are the festivals of yam, corn, and other crops.

In Asian and elsewhere, there are colorful, exciting, and popular festivals year-round. For instance, the Hindu festival of “Holi,” celebrated annually in March in India honors the triumph of good over evil and the festival coincides with the end of winter and the beginning of spring. It is a time to give thanks for a good harvest and a time to come together to resolve conflicts.

In America, Thanksgiving Day is a National Holiday celebrating the harvest and other blessings of the past year. It is also a day of feasting, shopping, watching sports, and a time of gathering with family members, friends, and neighbors.

Finally, we take this opportunity to welcome newly arrived diplomats and Consular personnel to their new post.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Miami International Airport Deploy Simplified Arrival For International Passengers

Just in time before the holiday travel season, Miami International Airport and U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) announced the airport-wide expansion of Simplified Arrival – CBP’s enhanced international arrival process that uses facial biometrics to automate the manual document checks already required for admission into the U.S. Among the leading U.S. airports for international passengers, MIA is the latest to fully deploy Simplified Arrival. After travelers arrive at MIA from an international flight, they will pause for a photo at the primary inspection point. CBP’s biometric facial comparison process will compare the new photo of the traveler to images the traveler has already provided to the government, such as passport and visa photos. In addition, foreign travelers who have traveled to the U.S. previously will no longer need to provide fingerprints as their identity will be confirmed through the touchless facial comparison process. “We are extremely proud to now be able to provide the convenience of Simplified Arrival to all of our international passengers... Now, clearing Customs for passengers throughout MIA is as easy as the click of a camera,” said Lester Sola, MIA’s Director and CEO.

National American Indian and Alaska Native Heritage Month / National Native American Heritage Month (November 1 to November 31) celebrates and recognizes the accomplishments of the peoples who were the original inhabitants, explorers, and settlers of the United States. At the beginning of the 20th century a movement started gaining momentum to establish a day of recognition for the contributions made by the native people to the establishment and growth of the U.S., as well as to educate everyone about their rich culture, history, heritage, art, and traditions. In 1914, Red Fox James, a Blackfoot Indian, rode horseback from state to state seeking approval for a day to honor Indians. In December the following year, he presented the endorsements of 24 state governments at the White House, however, there is no record of such a national day being proclaimed at that time. It wasn’t until 1986 that Congress passed a proclamation authorizing American Indian Week and not until 1990 that President George H. W. Bush approved a joint resolution designating November 1990 “National American Indian Heritage Month”. On November 1, 2020, President Trump issued a proclamation designating the month of November as National Native American Heritage Month.”

Thanksgiving Trivia

Some Florida historians have argued that the first Thanksgiving in North America took place in 1565 in Florida and not the one held 56 years later by the Pilgrims and Wampanoags in Plymouth, Massachusetts. Don Pedro Menéndez de Avilés the Spanish admiral waded ashore on September 8, 1565 and kissed a cross held aloft by the fleet’s captain, Father Francisco Lopez, who then claimed Florida for both his God and his country. As curious members of the indigenous Timucua, North American Indian Tribe looked on, the 800 newly arrived colonists gathered around a makeshift altar as Father Lopez performed a Catholic mass of thanksgiving for their safe arrival in the newly christened settlement of St. Augustine. At the invitation of Menéndez, the Timucuans then joined the newcomers in a communal meal. “It was the first community act of religion and thanksgiving in the first permanent settlement in the land,” wrote University of Florida professor emeritus of history Michael Gannon in his book “The Cross in the Sand.”

The first Thanksgiving football game was played between Princeton and Yale on November 30, 1876, and the first Macy’s Parade followed on November 27, 1924. The National Football League (NFL) took up the tradition in 1934, when the Detroit Lions played the Chicago Bears at the University of Detroit stadium in front of 26,000 fans. On October 6, 1941, Congress passed a joint resolution declaring Thanksgiving a national holiday to be celebrated on the last Thursday in November. President Roosevelt signed the resolution on December 26, 1941. Although it has lost most of its original religious significance, Thanksgiving has become a celebration that brings friends and families together.

In 2019, an estimated 55 million people in the United States travelled during Thanksgiving. It is unclear how the pandemic will affect this year’s travel, but according to a recent national poll, 56% of the respondents still plan to travel.
